

ABSTRACT

A chair has a seat that can be longitudinally repositioned by the user while the user is seated on the chair, so as to accommodate users of different heights and physical dimensions.

The chair includes a base, a seat slidable mounted on a seat plate, and activating arm that operates on lock means that engage the seat plate to secure the seat in a preferred longitudinal position relative to the seat plate.